A Rubik's Cube of Information

Anthony Lysenko, senior treasury analyst, has been with Hughes for eight months and already his contributions have made an outstanding difference in the Finance department. As the outstanding achievement award winner of the Leadership Excellence Recognition Program for the 4th quarter of 2004, his achievements have helped improve software, streamline processes and integrate the daily cash reports throughout many departments.

"I think of the entire company as a Rubik's Cube," said Anthony. "In Treasury we touch so many different business areas and help integrate information seamlessly through them." This ability to work with so many departments is what makes Anthony stand out. He meets with different teams throughout the company to determine the areas where the treasury department can provide information to improve their processes.

"Applying cross-functional information and knowledge can make or break a company. By learning many aspects of Hughes' applications I am able to provide solutions to many departments."

Anthony believes that education is the key to success in business.

"Learn what other departments do, sit down and talk with their people, educate yourself on their processes. Once you acquire that information, you not only will be helping yourself by gaining knowledge, but you'll be empowered to provide other people with ideas and solutions that they may need."

"I think of the entire company as a Rubik's Cube ... We touch so many different business areas and help integrate information seamlessly through them."
